2025 Awards

Industry Impact Award › to recognize a person, company or project that has made a significant contribution to improve health and safety in the local construction industry.

This year's recipient is Paul Lawson (Paul Lawson Helps LLC) for his outstanding leadership in mental health awareness and suicide prevention.

Paul's journey began at Mid-City Electric / Technologies, where he made a meaningful and lasting impact. He trained more than a thousand employees in suicide prevention, significantly increased utilization of the company's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) and helped other organizations connect with effective mental health resources.

His leadership extended through his work with the Builders Exchange, particularly on the BX Blueprints for Well-being Council's Steering Committee, where he plays a key role in building bridges between the construction industry and providers. Since then, Paul has launched an influential podcast, consulted with several companies across Ohio and has been featured on Channel 10 for his advocacy. On the award nomination application, many heartfelt testimonials were received from individuals whose lives have been directly affected by his efforts. There is no doubt that Paul's passion, commitment and tireless work have made a powerful impact on the construction industry and the people within it.
